Background

The forthcoming “Seminar on Recent developments on Economic and Commercial Legislation in Latin America” in Rome (“Sapienza” University) will be hosted in Italy, and organised by “Sapienza” University of Rome, Master in International Business Law (IBL) and the Chair of International Business Law (prof. D.U. Santosuosso), with the participation of the diplomatic missions to eight countries from Latin America.

It will aim at deepening the dialogue and exchanges of experience on economic and commercial law between Latin American Countries and EU Countries, and at sharing best practices and regulations governing the economic environment, as a key aspect for sustainable economic development and the improvement of the business climate. The examination of economic and commercial legislation and its effective implementation will aim, between others, at ensuring legal security, notably for investments to and from countries of the European Union, thereby providing support to the entrepreneurs on their road to more compliance with the rule of law.

This seminar has also the purpose to make known to the international traders, political relations between the two regions and how they are addressing the major issues of the companies bi-regional and international, being aware that the Latin American countries, taken as a whole, are considered of great interest in terms of population and of production capacity also related to the wealth of their natural resources.
